ANTONIO FREEMAN

After a successful college career at Virginia Tech, Antonio Freeman was drafted by the Green Bay Packers in the third round of the 1995 NFL Draft. He quickly established himself as a key contributor in the Packers' offense, forming a potent receiving duo with Brett Favre.

Freeman's breakout season came in 1998 when he led the NFL with 1,424 receiving yards and 14 touchdowns, earning his first Pro Bowl selection. He followed that up with another Pro Bowl season in 1999, helping the Packers win Super Bowl XXXI.

He retired from the NFL in 2004. He was inducted into the Green Bay Packers Hall of Fame in 2007.

James Jones is a former American football wide receiver who played 10 seasons in the National Football League (NFL). He played college football at the University of California, San Jose State. As a senior, he led the nation with 140 receptions and 1,411 receiving yards.

Jones was drafted by the Green Bay Packers in the third round (78th overall) of the 2007 NFL Draft. He spent the majority of his career with the Packers, becoming a key part of their offense. Additionally, he is a Super Bowl champion (XLV), Pro Bowl selection (2012), and led the NFL in receiving touchdowns (14) in 2012.

Standing at 6 feet tall and weighing 190 pounds, Reed combines a solid physical presence with remarkable agility and speed. His versatility allows him to excel both as a deep threat and a reliable target in short-yardage situations.

In his rookie season with the Packers, Reed has already demonstrated his potential to become a cornerstone of the team's offense. His work ethic, football IQ, and natural athleticism have endeared him to teammates and coaches alike.
